

William Seligman Bio 2020

William Seligman is a Specialist Registrar in Anaesthetics and Intensive Care Medicine in London. Having qualified from Oxford in 2014 where he was President of Osler House, William completed his Foundation training in Bristol. He subsequently studied for a Master of Public Health focusing on health policy and management at the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health where he was selected to give the commencement address.

William's clinical interest lies in the resuscitation of critically unwell patients. At Oxford, he co-founded the Student First Responders scheme, an internationally novel initiative that recruited and trained medical students to act as first responders in local communities, a model that has since been introduced nationally. He subsequently co-authored a textbook "Pre-Hospital Emergency Medicine at a Glance" which was recently published.

William has held prestigious leadership positions that include being Chair of the British Medical Association's Medical Students' Committee. He continues to teach physiology and pharmacology at Magdalen College and serves on the panel of interviewers for prospective medical students. He also serves as a tribunal member for the Medical Practitioners Tribunal Service determining whether doctors are fit to practise medicine.
